Let's catch the rain...

in buckets and bottles

in pools and schools

in pots and pans

in helmets and homes

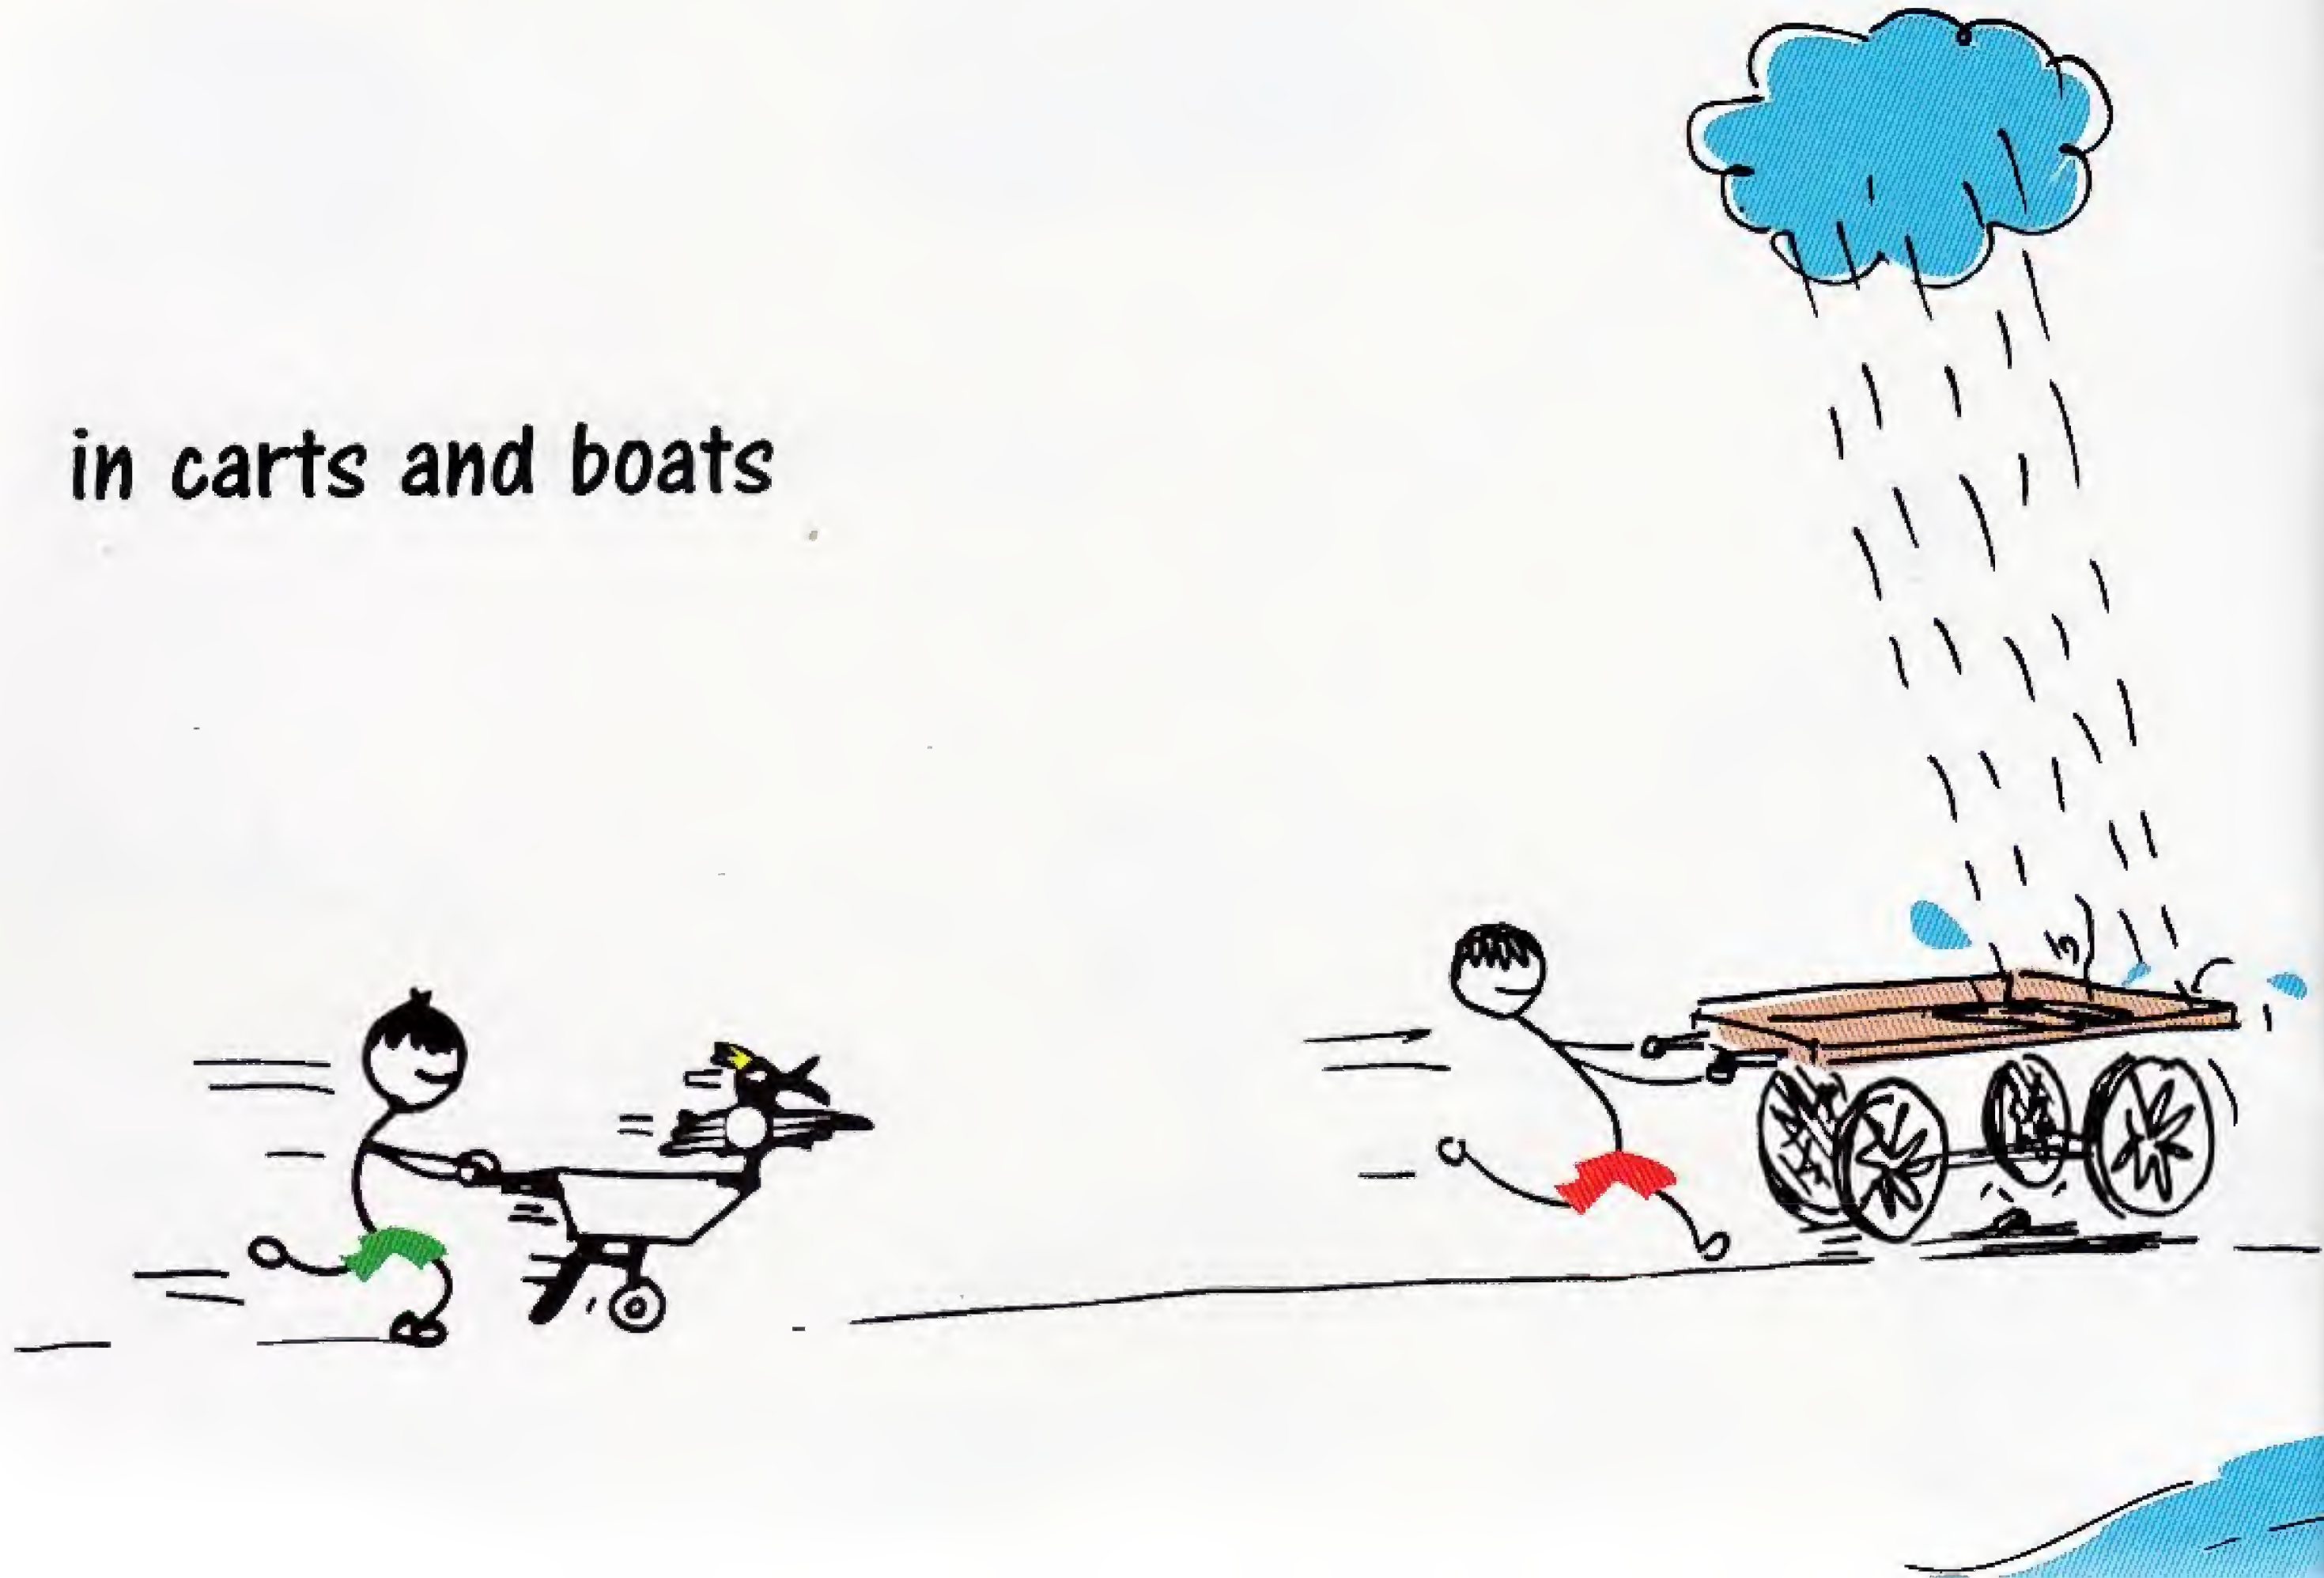

in balloons and umbrellas

in carts and boats

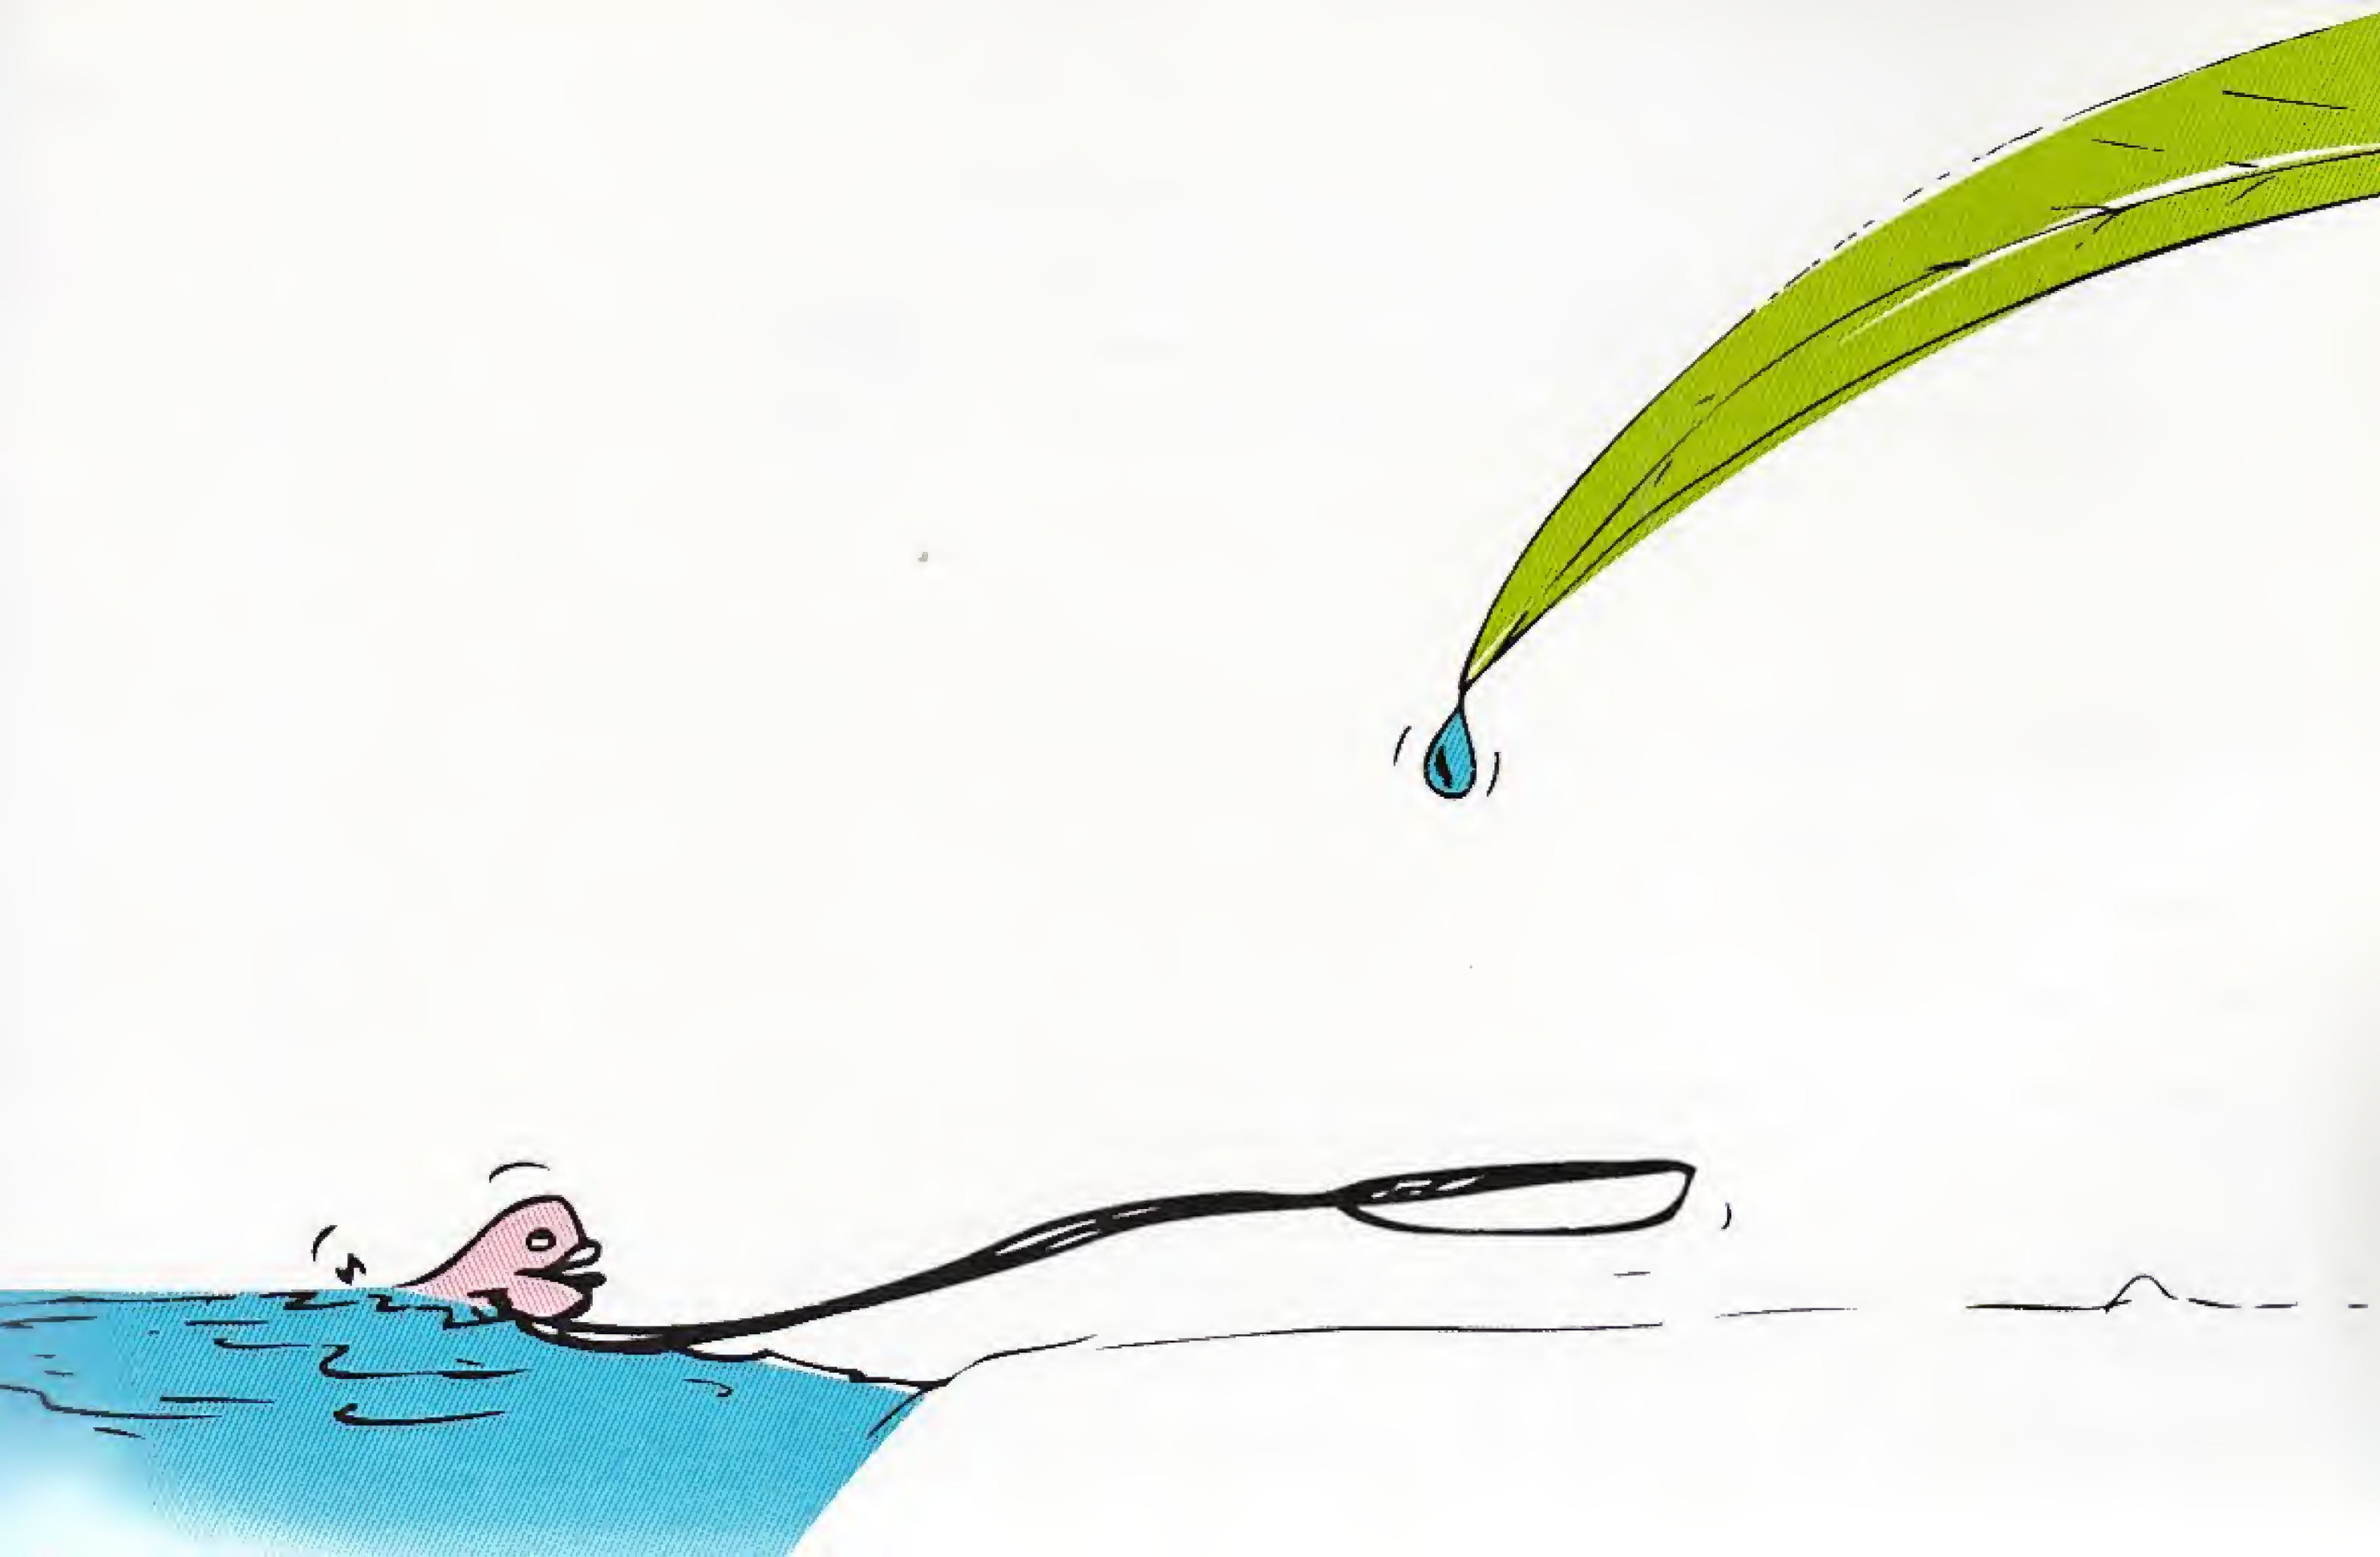

in wells and coconut shells.

Let's catch the rain wherever it falls!

Rainwater is the only source of freshwater available to different parts of the world, including deserts. People have been catching and storing rainwater for thousands of years. It's so simple, every child can do it. Remember only 1% of the world's water is freshwater. Visit catchtherain.org to know more.

After the much admired Let's plant trees, Vinod is back with Let's catch the rain. This time around, he chases and plays with big monsoon clouds! The message is simple: rainwater is free, pure and precious – let us save it.

Vinod Lal Heera Eshwer is an award-winning creative director, furniture designer, garden store entrepreneur and obsessive tree planter.
